| 1. You experienced Cognitive Behavioral Therapy and Heart Rate Variance interventions in virtual, augmented, and mixed realities. How would you describe your experiences with each of those headsets? | VR - very cumbersome; bulky and put a lot of pressure and strain on back of neck. feels that if there were some more support, it would be a more ideal headset with the best digital experience while being comfortable. AR - least immersive, but also the best on the body, felt like it was "okay." MR - felt like it was really confusing, but also really enjoyed the graphics and sounds.                                                                                                                     |
| 2. Do you think these types of technologies have a place in OUD treatment and management?If YES, how?If NO, why not?                                                                           | yes - if someone were to go through a program, it would benefit them to get out of their comfort zone in a short amount of time. personally helped this participant because they do not like dealing with and being around people and would rather deal with interventions virtually but notes that the downside would be not being held to the same amount of accountability. may be helpful to have someone on the outside monitoring while also keeping the interventions between patient and technology private |
| 3. How would you describe the iPAL application, in terms of a cravings management tool?                                                                                                                | easy to use, but thinks that someone could lie pretty easily and manipulate results unless questions are asked in different ways. would also be good to add questions that could gauge social determinants of health to get the full picture of what is going on with the individual (housing, employment) and also asking questions about their wellbeing (current depression/anxiety)                                                                                                                             |
| 4. How would you describe the interventions (CBT, HRV)?Were the interventions appropriate for the intensity level and triggers you reported?                                                       | CBT - mixture of like and dislike; felt like it was not personal, but it was also nice to not have someone "dissect their life." HRV - disliked, felt like it was too long and participant was unable to participate throughout the full intervention due to being a long-term smoker. feels like it would be helpful to have different variations of breathing exercises that are more helpful for individuals with lower lung capacity.                                                                           |
| 5. Do you think the iPAL app, or similar digital interventions delivered via phone should be integrated into OUD treatment plans?If YES, how and in what capacity or role?if NO, why not?      | yes - feels like it should be available for individuals in an outpatient setting during initial visits with providers so that their providers can holistically get to know their patients on a deeper level without the patient feeling uncomfortable.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| 6. If iPAL or a similar app was available, would you download the app and incorporate it into your OUD treatment and management plan?                                                                  | notes that participant personally wouldn't do it if it was not recommended by their provider, but would if their provider recommended it. would use as much as recommended by provider.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
